

Camberwell, London

This south west facing city garden belongs to a Victorian terraced house that the clients have recently redesigned and modernised. They requested a garden in which they can both relax and entertain. A garden with secrets to be discovered and a number of different places to sit and enjoy the space. They are keen gardeners who like planting with a naturalistic feel and would also like room to grow their own vegetables. The garden is a sun trap and as one client dislikes sitting out in the sun, a shady space was essential. A raised drain in the centre of the garden, that needs to be easily accessible, posed a challenge.

before image

Current Status – finalising design to be built Spring 2011

Examples of sketch designs

